Short profile

I am a Professor in Economics at Anglia Ruskin University (ARU), and the founding Director of the Centre for Pluralist Economics (CPE) at ARU.

I am a Senior Fellow at the UK's Higher Education Academy, and I am the Course Convener for (i) The Economics of Inequality, Discrimination, Poverty and Exploitation, and (ii) The Economics of Growth and Development in the International Programmes Department at the University of Cambridge, Pembroke College. I have developed and offered credit eligible courses which have been delivered to students from Harvard University, the University of Pennsylvania, Princeton University, the University of California, Berkeley, Stanford University and Yale University.

My research focuses on the correlations between wellbeing, employment, wages, and the economy as a whole. This includes areas such as the effect of an economic crisis on the physical and mental health of a population, the effect of health impairments on productivity outcomes, job satisfaction and demographic characteristics, unions and wage antidiscrimination policies, labour market discrimination against minority groups and the long-term impact on the economy, and the connection between gender identity, ethnic identity and employment outcomes.

My research agenda has a strong interdisciplinary emphasis. I find various combinations of diverse disciplines for a given research problem that might include economics, psychology, and health. My interdisciplinary research provides a steady stream of innovative projects and creative investigations that aim to evaluate causal patterns, inform social planners, and establish policy implications. I use mathematical and econometric modelling (quantitative analysis) to accomplish my research objectives.

I collaborate with the Centre for Science and Policy at the University of Cambridge as an Academic Expert on labour economics, where I provide expert knowledge to Directors from Whitehall, local government and the European Commission. I am a Spokesperson at the IZA World of Labour for a series of areas such as poverty, economic crisis, and ethnic identity. I am a Research Fellow for the Institute for Labor Economics based at Bonn, and a Fellow and Cluster Leader for the Global Labor Organization based at Bonn. I was the founding Director of Greece's Scientific Centre for the Study of Discrimination, which carried out social science research on labour and population economics. I have published articles in world leading and internationally excellent journals. I edit special issues in journals of international renown, and handbooks produced by world leading publishers.

I am an ad-hoc Expert to the European Commission via the European Centre of Expertise in the Field of Labour Law, Employment and Labour market Policies. I have collaborated with the European Commission's European Centre of Expertise on wealth and income inequality and with the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development (UK) on age discrimination in the labour market. I have collaborated with the Centre for Ageing Better (UK) on planning and preparing for later life. I have worked with the OECD and the Government Equalities Office (UK) on the recruitment and retention of minority population staff. I have worked on EU and World Bank research programs such as Horizon 2020, the Progress Programme, the European Territorial Cooperation Programme, and the Knowledge Platform Programme. My works on ethnic, racial, age, disability and sexual orientation discrimination and impacts on labour market outcomes have been utilized by the World Bank, the OECD, the ILO, the EC and European Governments to shape and inform future employment policies. I am a scholar in knowledge transfer and communications with audiences inside and outside of academia. My research findings are disseminated to academics, policy makers and the general public. I have been interviewed for my research by various media outlets, including; CNN, the Wall Street Journal, The New York Daily News, Yahoo! News, The Huffington Post, The Washington Post.

Research and administrative activities

Anglia Ruskin
University

I am the founding Director (2016-present) of the Centre for Pluralist Economics (CPE) in the Department of Economics and International Business at ARU. The CPE aims to influence economic decision making by examining a wide range of decisions, alternatives and their implications. A particular feature of the CPE is its orientation toward a pluralistic approach; this enhances the understanding of ethical, political, social and trust issues for formulating economic policy. The CPE focuses on the economics of: competition, discrimination, education, ethics, exploitation, growth, housing markets, innovation, institutional and organizational change, the Internet, law, networks, moral and political philosophy, pluralism, production, and sustainability. ARU and University of Cambridge students are involved in the CPE scholars' primary research, data collection, software and multivariate analysis and in learning under the supervision of the CPE scholars.

Global Labor
Organization

I am the GLO Gender Cluster Lead (2017-present). The Gender Cluster aims to provide evaluations of labour and organizational initiatives, practices and policies aiming at a higher degree of knowledge and inclusion for gender, gender identity and sexual orientation expressions. I edit special issues in academic journals and handbooks. The Gender Cluster includes studies on gender characteristics, stereotypes and deviations, trans identities, sexual orientation minorities and labour market outcomes.

Anglia Ruskin
University

I was the Deputy Head of Research and Enterprise (acting, 2016-2017), in the Department of Economics and International Business, LAIBS, ARU. I contributed to the organisation, management, development, promotion and delivery of business development and engagement activities, research consultancy and professional practice with in my department and Faculty and in their work with appropriate professional bodies and other relevant external organisations. I monitored and reviewed the performance of the department against their research and development targets, taking remedial action where required. Also, I implemented and coordinated departmental external income action plans and activity. Finally, I supported the Head of Department in the recruitment and retention of departmental doctoral students.

University of Cambridge	I am an Academic Expert, in the Centre for Science and Policy (2016-present). I Provide expert knowledge to Directors from Whitehall, local government and European Commission.
Institute of Labor Economics	I am a Research Fellow (2011-present) in the IZA, and a Topic spokesperson in the IZA World of Labor (2016-present). In the IZA World of Labor I collaborate with policymakers seeking labour market expertise in the following areas: Discrimination, Inequality, Poverty, Exploitation, Bullying, Disability, Health, Economic crisis, Depression, Job satisfaction, Sexual orientation, Transgenderism, Universities quality, Ethnic identity
Scientific Centre for the Study of Discrimination	I was the founding Director of the Scientific Centre for the Study of Discrimination (SCSD, Athens). Between 2007 and 2017, SCSD developed and implemented a number of questionnaire-based data sets and performed social science research regarding labour and population economics. The main aim of the SCSD was to evaluate the causes of social inequalities in the European labour market and the possibility that society might remove such inequalities, while exploring the interplay between human capital, health, mental health and social options for action. Undergraduate, postgraduate and research students in the UK, Greece and Cyprus had the opportunity to become involved in my primary research, data collection, software and multivariate analysis and to learn under my supervision.
University of Crete	I was a researcher in the Business Economics and New Technology Laboratory, at the University of Crete (2005-2010).
