TEACHING

Current PhD students at Warwick: Sarthak Joshi, Jiaqui Li, Bruno Souza. Essex PhD students who completed in the last year: Liza Benny (Senior Health Analyst, UK Health Security Agency) and Paulino Font (Postdoc, Kings College London). In the last five years I have supervised seven PhD students and six postdocs. I will provide a “master lecture” on gender as part of a Dutch Universities consortium lecture series for graduate students (March 2022). I was invited to provide two lectures at the Indian Statistical Institute (ISI) International Growth Centre (IGC) Summer School 13-14 July 2021, on topics related to gender and health respectively. I was invited to lecture at Summer Schools in Lugano (on mental health and child development) and in Prato (on the twin instrument) in 2013. I was invited to address PhD students at Essen in 2015, Paris in 2012 and Sussex in 2012. I’ve been invited to lecture to postgraduates on the MSc in International Economics at University Tor Vergata Rome (2006) and the Master of Advanced Studies in Children’s Rights at University of Fribourg Switzerland (2007, 2009). I have lectured in Oxford, Sussex, and Bristol since 1990. I have volunteered to participate in the Feedback Initiative of Ashoka University Delhi to pre-review research papers of junior colleagues in India. I am an invited senior mentor in the Global Colleagues Program hosted by Yale University. In Bristol I taught MSc Applied Economics, MSc Development Economics and International Health Inequalities (for medical students), and contributed to two South West Doctoral Training Centre courses: “Security, Conflict and Justice” and “Global Health Transformations”. In the year before, I taught the MSc/MPhil in Human Capital at Oxford and supervised MSc dissertations. Over the years I have taught several undergraduate and postgraduate courses including Economic Analysis (Micro & Macro), Econometrics, Applied Economics, Microeconomics, Labour Economics, Development Economics and Health Economics. I have lectured in the Departments of Economics, Politics and Medicine at Bristol and played a significant role in postgraduate advising. I had a PhD student complete each year in the last three years at Bristol and I have supervised about 25 MSc summer dissertations over the years. I launched an MSc Programme in Quantitative Development Economics and co-founded the Inter-Faculty BSc in International Health for medical students. I have been Unit director on courses and involved in admissions, progress monitoring, overseas exchange. I have acted as external examiner for PhD theses at UCL (2), Sapienza Rome, Imperial College London, the Paris School of Economics, LSE (2), Warwick, Cambridge, Toulouse, Uppsala, Otago NZ, Sussex and for the undergraduate programme in Mauritius.
